FARE THEE WELL: PRESIDENT MUSEVENI PAYS TRIBUTE TO AJELENA AERO, MOTHER OF FORMER REBEL COMMANDER FRANCIS EREGU

Aluka Anna Constance- Guest Writer

President Museveni has formally paid tribute to the mother of former rebel commander Francis Eregu known widely by his nom de guerre, "Hitler" becoming a quiet but powerful symbol of forgiveness, resilience, and national unity.

At age 101, Ajelena Aero had witnessed a century of Uganda's triumphs, trials, and transformations.

Her death on January

21st, 2026 at Soroti City Clinic after a prolonged illness marks the end of a remarkable life that bridged personal loss and national reconciliation.

Aero was laid to rest on Sunday, January 25, at her ancestral home in Arapai, Soroti City. The funeral drew family members, local leaders, and government representatives, reflecting her status as a respected elder whose influence extended far beyond her immediate family.

The Minister for Northern Uganda, Kenneth Omona (R) conveys his condolences on behalf of the President in Arapai, Soroti.

In a message read by the Minister for Northern Uganda, Kenneth Omona, President Yoweri Museveni expressed with profound, offering condolences on behalf of the Government and the National Resistance Movement (NRM).

The President referred to Aero as his “elder sister” and praised her dignity in the face of both personal and national trials.

Francis Eregu, Aero’s son, was a senior commander in the Uganda People’s Army (UPA), an armed group active in eastern Uganda during the late 1980s and early 1990s. The UPA fought government forces and contributed to insecurity in the Teso sub-region before its eventual defeat.

Despite this turbulent past, Aero became a symbol of reconciliation. In June last year, President Museveni personally visited her family at State House, extending forgiveness for past hostilities. The government also supported the construction of a home for Aero in her later years a gesture that underscored the administration’s commitment to healing and unity.

Through her life, Aero embodied resilience and the power of forgiveness. She weathered personal loss, societal upheaval, and the scars of conflict with quiet strength. Her passing leaves behind not only her family but a legacy of courage and reconciliation that continues to inspire the nation.

Ajelena Aero’s century-long life was a testament to the possibility of bridging divides, showing that even in the shadow of conflict, humanity and compassion can prevail.

REVIVING ITESO HERITAGE: SOROTI UNIVERSITY PLANS MUSEUM IN KATAKWI TO CELEBRATE CULTURAL IDENTITY

Soroti University has unveiled plans to establish a University Museum in Katakwi District aimed at preserving and promoting the rich cultural and traditional heritage of the Iteso people.

On 20th January 2026, a delegation from the university paid a courtesy visit to the Katakwi District Local Government leadership to formally seek permission and support for the proposed initiative.

The visit brought together selected district officials and cultural stakeholders who were invited to share their views on the planned museum. Participants also proposed and documented key cultural identities of the Teso community, which will serve as an important reference for tourism development and future education.

Addressing the district leadership, the Vice Chancellor of Soroti University, Professor Robert Ikoja Odongo, explained that the university intends to construct the museum on land that will be suitably allocated by the district. He noted that the primary purpose of the visit was to consult the leadership and secure approval for the establishment of a facility that will house cultural and traditional artifacts of the Teso heritage.

Professor Ikoja emphasized that the museum will also act as a hub for tourism and academic research, aimed at documenting cultural and tourism treasures of Teso that have been lost over time.

He highlighted the importance of engaging knowledgeable community members, particularly the elderly, who hold valuable historical knowledge of the region's past.

“It is important to have a record of where we came from. The worst experience is not knowing who you are. This initiative seeks to restore the cultural value of the Iteso people and their heritage. The museum will serve as a center of tourism excellence, generate revenue for the district, and act as an information center for future generations,” Professor Ikoja stated.

He further observed that increasing western cultural influence is gradually eroding Africa's true identity, a challenge that also affects the Teso community. He clarified that the project is not intended to oppose western culture, but rather to strengthen and preserve the Iteso heritage, enabling the community to define and appreciate its identity.

The engagement sparked vibrant discussions, with participants sharing deep insights into pre-colonial Teso life. Members spoke about cultural beliefs, the significance of birds, wind, and nature, and how these elements were believed to communicate directly with humans. The discussions revealed a strong sense that the initiative was long overdue and filled a gap that had existed for decades.

The Vice Chairperson of Katakwi District, Hon Ecuman Joseph, warmly welcomed the proposal and assured the university of the district's full support toward the establishment of the museum and the tourism research center. He noted that, considering the university's continued support and interventions within the district, the project should be fully embraced and accepted with gratitude.

Similarly, the Personal Assistant Secretary, Ms Akwi Harriet Faith, expressed appreciation to Soroti University for its partnership with the district. She acknowledged that the collaboration has significantly improved service delivery and local economic development, particularly through the contribution of student doctors and other development initiatives.

The proposed museum is expected to become a cornerstone for cultural preservation, education, and tourism development in Katakwi District and the wider Teso sub-region.

KATAKWI: INCUMBENT OMOLO GEOFFREY RETAINS LC5 SEAT IN CLOSELY CONTESTED POLL

Emukoki John Baptist, Communications officer-Katakwi

Hon Omolo Geoffrey has been re-elected as Local Council 5 Chairperson following the recently concluded LC5 general elections, securing a second term in office after a closely contested race.

The incumbent, who also won the NRM primary elections as the party flag bearer, was declared winner after polling 26,000 votes against 24,000 votes garnered by independent candidate Odaka Martin Omeedo. The results were officially announced at the Electoral Commission offices by the District Returning Officer, Mr. Stephen Makubuya, on the morning of 23rd January 2026.

With the victory, Hon Omolo will continue serving as District Chairperson, having first held the office from 2021 to 2026, and now set to lead the district from 2026 to 2031.

Addressing voters after his win, Hon. Omolo thanked the electorate for renewing their trust in his leadership, describing the outcome as an expression of good leadership, a gesture he does not take for granted.

He committed himself to serving the district to achieve development and emphasized collaboration, pledging to work together with stakeholders and government to reduce household poverty and improve their wellbeing by utilizing rightly government programs for group and individual income development.

He further highlighted education and service delivery as key priorities, noting that he would continuously engage government through the education department to draw strategies to improve the education standards in the district and ensure service delivery in the major sectors of education, health, community and roads.

Mr Omolo also cited achievements from his previous term and assured voters of improved performance.

“PDM and other government programs implementation is at 100%,” he remarked.

Meanwhile, District Returning Officer Stephen Makubuya, while announcing the results, expressed concern over voter participation. He observed low voter turn up during the LC5 elections and encouraged citizens to fully turn up and vote during the LC3 elections to own up their power and the leadership of the district.

The elections saw a significant shift in leadership, with many incumbent LC5 councillors including members of the executive losing their seats. Voting patterns reflected how candidates related with communities, as several special interest group leaders were replaced by new representatives.

Hon Omolo Geoffrey is widely recognized for his humility and leadership with a Christian background that twins him with integrity and honesty while serving the people.

Among those who retained their seats were Hon. Abur Betty, councillor for Palam Sub County, and Ojakal Rapheal Mark, councillor for Usuk Sub County. Others either lost in the elections or voluntarily gave space for new leadership by not contesting.

As the district prepares to constitute the next council, the new leadership is expected to blend experience with fresh representation.

MOSES ORIADA SECURES OVERWHELMING WIN IN KALAKI LC5 POLL

Julius Odeke, Communication Officer for Kalaki

The National Resistance Movement (NRM) flag bearer, Hon. Moses Oriada, has won the Kalaki District Local Council V chairperson seat with a resounding victory in the recently concluded Local Council elections.

According to results declared by the Electoral Commission, Oriada garnered 20,146 votes across all the eight sub-counties and the two town councils of Kalaki and Otuboi. Oriada previously served as the Local Council III chairperson for Otuboi Sub-county.

His closest challenger, Mr Patrick Eyangu, who contested as an independent candidate, came a distant second with 5,795 votes.

The Forum for Democratic Change (FDC) candidate, Mr Amos Odeng, a former district councillor representing Otuboi Town Council, secured 3,195 votes.

He was followed by the Uganda People's Congress (UPC) candidate, Mr Thomas Ochan Ayei. The National Unity Platform (NUP) candidate, Mr Charles Ojwok, finished last with 527 votes.

the will of the voters. She congratulated the winners and urged all candidates to maintain peace and unity in the district.

In his victory remarks, Oriada thanked the people of Kalaki for the overwhelming mandate and pledged to prioritize service delivery, infrastructure development, and inclusive governance. He called on his former rivals to join hands with him in building the newly created district.

Kalaki District, one of Uganda's newest administrative units, conducted its first Local Council elections amid heightened political interest, with voter turnout described as generally strong across most polling stations.

MAAIF, DISTRICT LEADERS DRAFT STRATEGIES FOR SUSTAINABLE LAND USE RESTORATION

Emukoki John Baptist, Communications Officer- Katakwi

As part of a commitment to enhancing sustainable land use in the district, the Production Department implementing the Uganda Climate Smart Agriculture Transformation Project (UCSATP) is engaging district stakeholders in community-led consultations to validate satellite-mapped data against actual field conditions. The exercise aims to identify land degradation hotspots and document existing indigenous soil and water conservation practices.

degraded vegetation and wetlands. The meeting focused on mapping the most affected areas and proposing interventions to regenerate the ecosystems.

Leading the MAAIF research team, Mr. Ogwang Francis Lecture,

An engagement held on Tuesday, 20th January 2026, at the District Council Hall brought together a technical team from the Ministry of Agriculture, Animal Industry and Fisheries (MAAIF) and district leadership to generate strategies for restoring a soil science lecturer at Muni University, Arua, noted that increasing human pressure on natural resources has greatly affected the environment.

“There has been a lot of human pressure on natural resources which has resulted into changes in weather patterns and climate change,” Mr Ogwang said.

He explained that the ground-truthing exercise is intended to establish the reality on the ground in order to guide effective interventions.

“The ground truthing aims at ascertaining the facts on ground as they are, which will guide on the interventions to try by far to restore the vegetations and ensure sustainable land use and conservation of the ecosystem,” he added.

While engaging communities across various sub-counties, the team used guiding questions to draw on local knowledge about ecosystem changes over time, community expectations, and perceived causes of land degradation. Communities in Abela Parish in Getom Sub-county, Magoro, and Ongongoja expressed similar concerns and called for immediate interventions.

to land degradation and sustainable land use had a similar perspective with clear expression of immediate interventions to save the situation. They gave scenarios and life testimonies of indigenous vegetations and proper land use for example the communal land use which provided for animal paths, grazing land most interestingly communal crop production which is not the case now.

Mr Osege George Justine, representing UCSATP, outlined the project's strategic focus areas.

“Among the many strategies of the project is to support sustainable land management practices, promote agroforestry, and enhance climate information services,” he said.

He further emphasized capacity building and research. “We provide training and skilling programs for farmers, extension agents and other stakeholders, and under research and development we support applied research and innovation in climate-smart agriculture,” Mr Osege explained.

The District Vice Chairperson, Hon Ecuman Joseph, pointed out practices contributing to ecosystem distortion.

“There has been distortion of the ecosystem. Animals have been taken to the wetlands referred to as boarding and left gardens unfertilized with dung as manure,” he said.

He urged extension workers to guide farmers toward better practices.

“Extension workers should encourage farmers to return animals back home to restore the ecosystem and give value to every chain,” Hon Ecuman added.

In his closing remarks, Assistant Resident District Commissioner Ongobe Lawrence emphasized coordination and knowledge transfer.

“There is a need for harmonization of value chains,” he said. He urged extension workers to trickle down this knowledge to the local person to understand sustainable land management.

Following field visits by teams that split into three groups, Magoro and Getom sub-counties were identified as major degradation hotspots requiring urgent soil and water conservation interventions and restoration of vegetation and ecosystems.
